Future We Want”, and aiming to contribute to follow-up processes, including the identification and realization of sustainable development goals,

Recognizing that human beings are at the centre of concerns for sustainable development, that the right to development must be fulfilled in order to meet the development and environment needs of present and future generations equitably, and that the human person is the central subject of development and should be the active participant in and beneficiary of the right to development,

Reaffirming that all human rights are universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated,

Recalling the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights, as endorsed by the Human Rights Council in its resolution 17/4 of 16 June 2011,

Recognizing that sustainable development and the protection of the environment can contribute to human well-being and to the enjoyment of human rights,

Recognizing also, conversely, that climate change, unsustainable management and use of natural resources and the unsound management of chemicals and wastes may interfere with the enjoyment of a safe, clean, healthy and sustainable environment, and that environmental damage can have negative implications, both direct and indirect, for the effective enjoyment of all human rights,

Recognizing further that, while the human rights implications of environmental damage are felt by individuals and communities around the world, the consequences are felt most acutely by those segments of the population who are already in vulnerable situations,

Recognizing that the enhancement of international cooperation in the field of human rights is essential for the full achievement of the purposes of the United Nations, including the effective promotion and protection of all human rights,

1. Notes with appreciation the reports of the Independent Expert on the issue of human rights obligations relating to the enjoyment of a safe, clean, healthy and sustainable environment submitted to the Human Rights Council at its twenty-second¹ and the twenty-fifth² sessions;

4. Recognizes that human rights law sets out certain obligations on States that are relevant to the enjoyment of a safe, clean, healthy and sustainable environment, and that the enjoyment of the corresponding human rights and fundamental freedoms can be facilitated by assessing environmental impact, making environmental information public and enabling effective participation in environmental decision-making processes, and that in that regard a good practice includes adopting, strengthening and implementing laws and other measures to promote and protect human rights and fundamental freedoms in the context of environmental legislation and policies;

6. Also reaffirms the importance of non-discrimination in the application of environmental laws, but also of paying due attention to the members of groups particularly vulnerable to environmental harm, bearing in mind that environmental damage is felt most acutely by those segments of the population already in vulnerable situations;
7. Recognizes the role of human rights obligations and commitments in informing and strengthening international, regional and national policymaking in the area of sustainable development and environmental protection, and the importance of identifying best practices in that regard;
8. Urges States to comply with their human rights obligations when developing and implementing their environmental policies;
9. Recognizes the important role played by individuals, groups and organs of society, including human rights defenders, in the promotion and protection of human rights as they relate to the enjoyment of a safe, clean, healthy and sustainable environment;
10. Also recognizes the importance of giving due consideration to human rights obligations relevant to the enjoyment of a safe, clean, healthy and sustainable environment while shaping the post-2015 development agenda;
11. Stresses the particular relevance of international cooperation in addressing the impact on the enjoyment of human rights that may result from environmental harm;
12. Recognizes the need to clarify further the scope of human rights obligations of States as they relate to environmental harm;
13. Welcomes the cooperation extended to date to the Independent Expert by different actors, and calls upon all States to continue to cooperate with the Independent Expert in the discharge of his mandate and to respond favourably to requests for information and visits;
